

IN THE WOMAN'S WORLD

HONOLULU GIRLS SHOULD TAKE MORE ADVANTAGE OF WAIKIKI

Sea-Bathing Neglected by Local People but Tourists Appreciate It

While a guest at the Outrigger Club the other day the thought that the residents of Honolulu do not appreciate the beach at Waikiki came to my mind. There were perhaps fifty persons in bathing, a pitifully small proportion of our pleasure-loving population. There were, however, a number of young girls there who seemed to be enjoying the splashing breakers to their full extent.

These young ones seemed not to care if their golden or chestnut tresses did get wet and each breaker brought the whole group of them far up on the sand a rollicking, laughing, tangled up bunch of humanity. Another thing that was noticeable about this particular group was the bathing suits they wore, none of them to say the least stylish, they were little princess patterns over boys' suits. In this way the hindrance that comes from a full skirt and long, wide bloomers was done away with and the girls all seemed to be conscious of a great sense of freedom.

The majority of the girls who have perhaps just reached the young lady stage of their lives, seem, for the most part, to almost shun the beach with its scorching sun. True, one does not enter the ball room with gleaming white face, neck and arms, but a good, healthy coat of tan and a smile of good fellowship will do far more towards giving oneself and one's friends a good time than a merely pretty face. In all of the cities on the mainland the girl who returns from her summer vacation looking as pale and flower-like as she did when she departed is laughed at by her friends.

No Excuse Should Be Given. So many girls and women offer as their excuse for not being frequent visitors at the beach that fact that they are unable to swim. This excuse is really a laughable one for any one who goes about it in the right way can learn to swim and that both gracefully and with speed. An example of this was brought before my observation.

ANGEL IN SLUMS OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 13.—"Homes for women" is the motto under which we do everything. Women can do more in a social way than they can do publicly. But the trouble with the women today is they are going about it in the wrong way.

"A woman should not be afraid of housework, nor afraid to do her duties well. I have scrubbed floors here and cleaned garbage cans. I left Fifth avenue because I could do no good there, and because I can and am doing good here in Christie street."

Mrs. Theodore Roberts, vice president of the California club, an author of international reputation, paused a while from her cooking and cleaning in the house in "Criminal row" to tell me why she gave up her lovely home and dainty surroundings to live among the really poor and depraved, Christie street goes by the name of "Criminal row," and the "Baret mission," which Mrs. Roberts conducts, is right in the heart of this hovels. She is like a pure spirit literally surrounded by squalor. As she talked with me seven dirty faced children ranging from 2 to 12 years of age came in to be washed and fed. The sight of this optimistic reformer in her light blue silk gown, clean and neat as a pin, elegant in the heart of inelegance, was an inspiration.

tion about three years ago. A young lady who had been very anxious to learn to swim, and who, to some extent had tried to learn without the help of one who knew the strokes, entered a class of girls who were studying under a noted professor.

After spending a good deal of time and almost as much money, she was able to, we shall say, swim. Another girl, a friend of hers who had neither the money nor the inclination to learn in this manner, spent all of her leisure hours with island boys and girls at Waikiki and within a year's time was known to be one of the good swimmers on the beach. This all helps to prove that one needs only to be willing to take the duckings at the beach, not in a tank, and to put forth every effort, to learn to swim. An article in one of the San Francisco papers tells of many of the society maids and matrons who are devoting their entire time this summer to the beach, or rather the mountain streams where those who are able swimmers are teaching a score or more of apt and willing pupils.

Tourists Appreciative. The people who really seem to appreciate our beach are the tourists. Many of them who travel each summer say that it is superior to many of the bathing resorts both on the Pacific and Atlantic Coasts in that the tide is never too high for even the smallest member of the family and it is never too cold or too rough for any one. Santa Cruz, California, is one of the fashionable summer resorts on the western coast, and although the beach is crowded from early morning to late at night with bathing-suit clad figures, comparatively few of the women go in swimming in the ocean because of the chilly water, and, indeed, the majority of the men swim in the bathing tanks filled with warm salt water. Swimming in a tank may be a most enjoyable sport but it is far more dangerous than the wide, wide ocean, both from the point of health and the fact that the many apparatuses put up for the benefit of the man and the practical swimmer lead the dare-devil youth far beyond the point of safety and often are the cause of fatal accidents.

At Atlantic City, wherein many of

"All my life I have wanted to do this kind of work," she said. "I believe the only way we can do real good is to come and live right here in the midst of things and, by our teachings and example, elevate the people to a high standard of living."

"In my apartment upstairs I have everything as expensive and elegant as possible. The children love to come up to my rooms because they feel it is their home. But they must keep busy all the time. I will not tolerate idleness. It makes me nervous."

"I have 12 chosen companions, whom I call my twelve apostles."

Just then a knock came at the door and four little girls entered. Upon receiving a nod of approval from Mrs. Roberts they scattered about the rooms to finish the work that had been interrupted.

"That little girl with the duster is St. Peter," said Mrs. Roberts. "She bosses the job and is usually in trouble. I had the hardest time with her when she first came but now she is one of my dearest daughters."

"You have no idea what a filthy condition I found this house in, nor what unkept homes I learned the children were living in. Everything has changed now. The children by their example have created a new atmosphere in life and are making their houses into homes."

the eastern society folk spend their summers, the water is far too cold for the average person and the breakers are so high and fierce looking that many are afraid to venture far beyond the water's edge.

Coral Being Removed. There has for some time been complaints made concerning the excess of coral at the Waikiki beach. There has been much of this rock both in front of the Moana and Seaside Hotels. This will soon be done away with, however, for blasting is being done in the water near the Moana pier and raft, and the bathers will soon find instead of coral a soft, sandy floor there.

Clubs within clubs could easily be formed by the girls and women here, and many of the warm summer afternoon spent at the beach. Members of the Outrigger Club who at the present time are spending Wednesday afternoon at bridge would probably enjoy that time at Waikiki with the same congenial friends. There have been of late a few surfing parties, but if we were balancing in a scale the dancing or bridge parties with the bathing parties the latter would be high up in the air.

POLLARDS BRING A FUTURE STAR

Juveniles Open Engagement in "Sergeant Brue" to Big Audience

A new star in juveniles has dawned on the theatrical horizon, and strange to say, it dawned at night. The latest addition to the juvenile constellation is Miss Queenie Williams, a diminutive youngster with the Pollard Juvenile Opera company, which opened its local engagement last evening at the Bijou theater.

Little Miss Queenie Williams helps to maintain the Pollard tradition of producing a clever new actor or actress every season. She is about the smallest of the company in size and her part last night in the opening bill "Sergeant Brue" is merely that of a servant, but she puts into it a spirit and a grotesque exaggeration that makes her work stand out and gives much promise for the future.

Old friends were greeted last night and new ones welcomed by a house that was "capacity" without stretching the truth. By eight o'clock announcement was made that all the seats were sold.

"Sergeant Brue" is familiar to most playgoers, having to do with a London policeman who falls heir to fifty thousand dollars a year. The chief exponents of the result are his nephew, his daughter, Crookie Scrubs, a criminal, Lady Blackhall, a society leader, and Mr. Crank, the magistrate.

Among the old friends of the company received with applause last night were Miss Eva Pollard and Teddy McNamara, both of whom show that they have developed and matured in acting as well as in person since their last appearance here.

As a whole the company gives the same impression. In fact, it is with some regret that those who saw the Liliputians in days gone by when they were just clever, witty, "kids" now recognize that they are fast growing up and some of them have grown up into youngmen and women. The company is capable, but needs a lot of work to smooth over the rough spots. The humorous distortion of Daisy and of Crookie Scrubs, the eccentric criminal played with great effect by Mr. Willie Bevan, now stand out above the singing the the acting of those whose work ought to be the feature.

The big house enjoyed the show last night and the company should have a successful run here.

Mr. Norman Pearce gave a good portrayal of Sergeant Brue, and Willie Pollard was fair as his nephew. Sergeant Brue will be given tonight and tomorrow night, and will be followed by the ever-popular "Mikado."

RAYMOND SHOWS NEW ILLUSIONS

Levitation, that crowning, weird illusion invented centuries ago by the East Indian conjurers and used effectively ever since, proved a fitting climax to the Great Raymond's new program of mystifying feats at Ye Liberty last night. Despite its age this unique trick never fails to puzzle and cause thinking persons to doubt whether the conjuror is not really possessed of strange, unnatural powers.

The feature, which Raymond calls "Astrala," consists, or seems to consist, of slowly raising a human body from a table into the air, poising it above his head with no visible means of support. Using one of his attractive feminine assistants, he went through the motions of hypnotizing her, placing the rigid body on the table, and after some gyrations covering the body with a sheet.

Then at his signal the form rose into the air, the table was removed and he passed a large hoop over the body several times to prove that no cords or other unseen support held it there. In a moment, firing a pistol and snatching the sheet away, he left only blank space where the girl had been an instant before.

Raymond performed a number of entirely new tricks, scattering them along through a maze of older ones that have been seen before as performed by other magicians, and changing from one to another with a rapidity that kept the audience closely attentive throughout the three long periods of the entertainment.

Not the least of his performance is his "line of patter" or small talk, and the manner in which he produced a big black die from the "katy" of a well-known local sporting promoter brought a roar of laughter from the audience. Despite the excellence of the new program, Raymond will change to still another next Thursday evening, and from that to a third Saturday evening, the night of his farewell performance. For the women and children he will give a special entertainment Saturday afternoon.

SUFFRAGETTE IN ROLE OF FIREBUG

OXFORD, Eng., July 13.—Helen Crags, the suffragist, who on June 26 at Cardiff, Wales, broke through the police cordon and sprang at Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, when he was driving with King George and Queen Mary, was charged today in the police court here with being found in Nuneham Park, the country residence of Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies, with the intention of setting fire to the mansion. The accused was remanded. She declined to say anything in court.

She was found during the night with another woman in the grounds by a watchman. Searched, she was found to be carrying a quantity of inflammable material and spirits. The suffragists are particularly incensed at Lewis Harcourt.
